NARRATIVE

OFTHE

SHIP-WRECK

OFTHE

NOTTINGHAM GALLEY, &c.

First PUBLISH'D in 1711.

REVIS'D, and RE-PRINTED

With ADDITIONS in 1727,

R E-PUBLISH'D in 1730,
And now propos'd for the last Edition, during the Author's Life-time,

By JOHN DEANE,

Then COMMANDER, of the Nottingham Galley; but now, and for many Years past,

His Majesty's Consul for the Ports of Flanders, Residing at Ostend.

---

WATALAM AMERIKAN WANG

The PREFACE.

OBSERVE with Concern, that Virtue is come to so low an Ebb of Esteem in the present Age, that Performances of a Serious, instructive Nature, commonly meet with the hard Fate of being re-ceiv'd with an Air of Contempt and Ridicule, by the Generality of Mankind. Nor ought avails the friendly, and disinterested Design of the Admonisher to screen bim from this unkind Treatment; tho this perverse, prevalent Humour, has undoubtedly stifled many excellent Things in their Birth, that otherwise, had they come to Light, might have prov'd of singular Service to the Publick.

I shall not takeupon me to determine, how criminal their Modesty is, who upon such slight Discouragements, abandon a just and commendable Design: Since every Man is best acquainted with the Importance of the Motives that prompt him to undertake, and how far his Conscience convinces him of its being his Duty to persevere in accomplishing such his Purpose: As for my own Part, I think, I have just Grounds to venture this small Narrative into the American World, as an humble Acknowledgement to Almighty G O D for his wonderful Preservation of us; and hoping it may be of use to others, should the like unhappy Circumstances ever attend them.

I had indeed Thoughts of perpetuating the Memory of our Deliverance in a different Manner; but my innocent Intentions met with an unexpetted Opposition, that induc'd me to have recourse to this present A 2

The PREFACE.

present Method: and I hasten'd the Execution, in 1727, whilst there were living Witnesses in New-England, to attest the Truth of our signal Escape from Boone-Island.

And I now again recommend it to the serious Perusal of all, but especially Sea-faring Men, who, of all others, are most liable to sudden Dangers, thro' the natural Inconstancy of the Elements they converse with in pursuit of their lawful Employments; and consequently ought to lead the most considerate, religious Lives, in order to face Death, if it be God's Will, in the most dreadful Form, with a Christian Resolution. For, as to that Set of Men, who affect to pass for Wits and Bravoes, by giving a ludicrous Turn to every Thing grave and solemn; and assuming an Air of Intrepidity, by borrid Oaths and Imprecations, before the too near Approaches of Danger, I have always observed them, first of all others, to fink under Despair, upon a Prospect of inevitable Death; even so as shamefully to desert all the necessary Means that offer'd for a Possibility of their Deliverance. The Consciousness of their Guilt overwhelming their Minds with the last Degree of Confusion.

I have thus given my Sentiments, and the Rea-Jons of printing and distributing this Narrative, as well at the former Juncture, as at this present Period of Time: That it may be useful and acceptable, is the hearty Defire of, Gentlemen,

Your fincere Well-wisher,

And very Humble Servant,

JOHN DEANE.

NARRATIVE

Of the SHIP WRECK of the Notting ham Galley, &c.

in

w-rpe

er-

of

onets;

ite,

be

a

en,

ing

nn;

ths

bes

all

t of fert

lity

reir

ea-

ive,

lent

pt-

int,

E.

HE Nottingham Galley, of, and from London, 120 Tuns, 10 Guns, and 14 Men, having taken in part of her Loading in England, and part in Ireland, fail'd on a Trading Voyage, for Boston in New-England, the 25th of September, 1710; but meeting with contrary Winds and bad Weather, they descried not the Land of New-England, then cover'd with Snow, till the 11th of December following; and then, in a Quarter of an Hour, loft fight of it again by the Fogs and hazy Weather, that had prevented their taking an Observation for 10 or 12 Days before; which with the unaccountable Currents here met with, fo disconcerted their Reckoning, they could not, with Certainty, determine what Part of the Coast they had seen: However, the Wind being N. E. and the Land lying N. E. and S. W. they concluded it both fafe and adviseable to steer S. W. 'till 10 a Clock at Night, and then lye by 'till the Morning, with the Head of their Vessel off from the Land. As it blew hard, accompanied with Rain and Snow, they carried but little Sail; and about 8 or 9 at Night, the Mate being flightly indisposed, the Master, upon Deck, going forward, faw, to his infinite Suprize, the Breakers a-head very near them; and instantly calling out to the Steersman, to put the Helm hard a Starboard, was so ill obey'd in the sudden Astonishment, as to have the very reverse perform'd; tho', had it been otherwise, they were too near to avoid the impending Danger; fo the Ship struck, with great Violence, against a Rock call'd Boone-Island, about 7 Leagues Eastward from the Mouth of Piscatagua River. The Night was so dark that they could difcern no Land; and the Sea running very high, foon heav'd the Vessel along Side of the Rock, where, still continuing to make a free Pasfage over them, and the Ship therewith excessively labouring, they could no longer keep the Decks; and therefore the Master calling down all Hands, fpent a few Minutes in the Cabbin in earnestly subplicating Mercy; and then, exhorting one and all to use their utmost Efforts to cut the Masts by the Board, he re-ascended the Deck with such as had Presence of Mind to assist him, and cutting the weathermost Shrouds, the Fury of the Winds and Seas, with the violent Agitation of the Ship, foon broke the Masts, and they fortunately fell right towards the Rock.

As they could only perceive fomething black ahead, without being certain whether Land or Rock, the Master persuaded the Mate, and two others, all good Swimmers, to quit the Wreck, and make the first Essay to recover Land, in order to give Intelligence of the best Place of Landing for the rest of the Ship's Company, if Providence should favour their Essape.

At this Juncture, the Master went down into the Cabbin to secure some Money and Papers that might ly rd

to-

d;

to

ck,

ne-

ith

nat

ing

he

af-

ely

KS;

ds,

ab-

all

he ad

he

nd

on sht

ack,

rs,

ke

ve

he

ald

nto

iat

ht

might be of Service, in case he sav'd his Life; and having first furnish'd himself with a Flint. Steel, and a little Gun-powder, just as he open'd the Box, wherein the Money and Papers lay, the Ship bulging, her Stern funk into deeper Water, and with much Difficulty he regain'd the Fore-part of the Vessel, where hearing nothing from the first Adventurers, he concluded them loft; however, being under a Necessity of making the like Attempt, he threw off his Cloaths to his Wastcoat, and without either Wig or Cap, cast himself, with all his Might, from the Wreck, seconding the Motion of the Sea towards the Rock; and lighting unexpectedly on the Fore-mast and Rigging that lay in the Water, he mov'd gradually forward betwixt every Sea, 'till he touch'd the Rock with his Foot; and yet the Mast proving too short, and the Rock exceeding flippery, he was obliged once more to commit himself to the Mercy of that Element, which heav'd him with fuch Violence against the craggy Point of the Rock, as bruised his Body, and tore his Hands miferably; and, upon the Recess of the Wave, he was carried off again into the Sea: By this Time his Strength was near exhausted, and he had taken in much Water, yet preferving the Use of his Reason, and being, upon the next Elevation of the Sea, tost upon a more eminent Part of the Rock, and catching hold thereof with fuch impetuous Force, as tore off the Flesh and Nails of his Fingers, he prevented his being wash'd off again, and crept up into a Place of Security, before the next Revolution of the Sea. After a little Recovery of himself, and some Discharge of Salt-water; the Master gave Assistance to the rest rest of the People, who, with much less Difficulty, got safe on Shore at a more commodious Place of the Rock. Ascending a little higher, they heard the three Men that sirst escap'd to Land and by 10 being assembled together, they, with joyful Hearts return'd their most humble Thanks to Divine Providence for their miraculous Deliverance from fo imminent a Danger.

They then fought Shelter, to the Leeward of the Island, from the Extremity of the Cold, Snow, and Rain, but found it a mere Rock, without a Shovelful of Earth, and destitute of the Growth of a single Shrub; besides, so small and inconside able, as not to exceed 100 Yards in Length, and 50 in Breadth at high Water; and withal so craggy, as not to admit of their walking to keep themselves warm. In this disconsolate Condition they fpent the first miserable Night:

At Appearance of Day-light the Master went to the Place of the Wreck, proposing to find Provifions, either in the Remainder of the Ship, or in the Concavities of the Rock, but was amazed to fee only a few odd Things, with fome Plank, Timber, and Canvas, drove on Shore, but nothing eatable, except a few Fragments of Cheefe, beater into uncouth Forms by the violent Dashing of the Sea against the Rock; this, being carefully collected, might amount in the whole, to the Quantity of three small Cheeses, and, at some Distance, lay the broken Pieces of the Masts and Yards, with fome torn Sails and Cordage, all intangled in the Cables, and restrain'd by the Anchors from being driven away, yet kept moving with the Sea, at present out of their Reach. Fire Place count of the Wet and Cold; they fought to prothey cure this Bleffing by a Variety of Means, as Flint, ind Steel, and Gun-powder, and afterwards by a Drill with of very swift Motion, but all the Materials in their ank Possession naturally susceptible of Fire, being, on ver- this Occasion, throughly Water-soak'd, after 8 or 10 Days unfuccessful Labour, they gave over the d of fruitless Attempt.

now. The fecond Night they stow'd, one upon anoout a ther, under the Canvas, in the best Manner they owth could devise to keep each other warm. And the folfide lowing Day, the Weather clearing up, and inclinand ing to Frost, the Master, seeing the nearest Part of crag- the Main Land, knew it to be Cape Neddock; and nem- from thence took Occasion of encouraging his Peothey ple with Hopes of being discover'd by Fishing Shallops, or other Vessels occasionally passing that way; it to altho, all the while, he was confcious to himfelf; rovie that rarely any Thing of this Kind happen'd at or in that unseasonable Time of the Year; however, he d to thought it good Policy to put the best Face on im- the Matter, and take this Advantage of their eat Ignorance and Credulity; fince he already too plainater ly observ'd their great Dejection, and frequent Ref the lapses into an utter Distrust of Divine Providence.

lect As, after a Shipwreck, all Discipline and Comntity mand ceases, and all are reduc'd to a State of Equalay lity; so the late Master perceiving some refusing to with give Assistance, even when required in necessary the Matters, he purposely withdrew from the Society, eing under Pretence of collecting Materials for future , at Use, in order to give them a fair Opportunity of freely electing an Head, or Chief Commander; Fire but, returning one Evening, he was inform'd by the People, that they had invested him with the same full Powers of issuing all Orders, and punishing any in Case of Disobedience, as before on board the Ship; and this they had enforced with the stronger Sanction, in regard to some Opposition made by the Mate and two others, against the Master's any longer enjoying the Supreme Command. And from this Time forward, the Master exercis'd some Authority; but not 'till he had consulted the Body, if in any Affair of Importance.

It will scarce meet with Credit to report how much the Impression of their Misfortunes had impair'd their Memories in fo short a Space of Time, to that they divided in Opinion concerning the Number of Days they had been on that unfortunate Island; the Consequence whereof was, they kept two Christmas-days that Year, and two Sundays every Week, 'till Providence fent the Veffel for their Relief. About the 3d or 4th Day, our Cook, unused to the Hardships of a Sea-faring Life, complain'd of a violent Illness, which appear'd but too visibly in his Countenance; he was lodg'd with two or three others, the most infirm, and died about Noon: They placed the Corpfe near Lowwater-mark, and the flowing Tide carried it away; none fo much as hinting to referve it for Sustenance; tho' feveral afterwards confess'd they had Thoughts of appropriating it to that Use. They as yet retain'd some Sense of Humanity, being hitherto Strangers to the exquisite Torture of excessive Hunger, they receiving the Cheese divided into equal Shares, about half a Pound a Man each Day, as the casting of Lots decided; so that the Master, who, by working very hard, when the Weather permitted, exhausted his Spirits, and render'd his

ne

17

he

er

by

ny

m u-ly,

WC

m-

ne,

he

tu-

insel

our

fe,

ut

ith

a-

20-ly;

ce;

hts

re-

rto

un-

ual

as

er,

her

Ap-

Appetite more importunate, had not the least Particle more than such as gave no Manner of Affistance; however, he reap'd one Benefit, for maintaining of Warmth by Action, he preserv'd a due Circulation of Blood, imparting a benign Influence to his whole System; whereas a severe Frost setting in with Extremity of Cold, so benumm'd and discolour'd the Hands and Feet of the Unactive, as render'd them, in a Manner, useless, and past Sense of Feeling, not without Danger of Mortification. And fuch as had quitted the Wreck with Boots on, had Blifters on their Legs to fuch a Degree, that the Skin came off, with the Nails of their Toes. All this still aggravated the Master's Care and Toil, who daily dress'd their Ulcers, and washing them in Urine, or Salt-water, bound them up in clean Rags, supplied from two Pieces of Linnen, amongst other Things, driven on Shore; and, every Evening, they all of them wrapp'd up their Legs in large swathing Bands of Oakum pick'd and dried for that Purpose.

Their first Enterprize of Moment, was the erecting of a Tent, in a triangular Form, about 8 or 5 Foot in Diameter, cover'd with Sails and old Canvas, and strow'd with pick'd Oakum for Bedding; it was only capacious enough to receive them all, lying down side-ways, so that no Man could turn himself without the general Concurrence. This occasioning some Disputes, was referred to the Master's Appointment, who, usually, once in two Hours perform'd it, upon publick Notice given. On the Top of the Tent a Staff was six'd, on which, as the Weather presented, was koisted up a Piece of white Cloth, in the Form of B 2

Flag, in view of discovering themselves to any Vessel that accidentally should pass that Way.

The next Undertaking, was the building of a Boat out of Timber and Plank extracted from the Wreck; having for Tools the Blade of a Cutlash, made into a Saw with their Knives, an Hammer, and a Caulking-Mallet: Some Nails they found in the Clefts of the Rock, and others they drew out of the Sheathing. Three Planks were laid flat for the Bottom, and two up each Side, fix'd to Stanchings, and let into the Bottom-Timbers, with two short Pieces at each End, and one Breadth of new Holland's Duck round the Vessel, to keep out the Spry of the Sea; they caulk'd her with Oakum, drawn from old Junk; and fecur'd the Seams with Canvas, Pump-leather, and Sheet-lead, as far as the Extent of their small Stock would allow; a short Mast was fix'd, with a square Sail; seven Paddles provided for Rowing, and an eighth, longer than, ordinary, for Steering. All this was accomplish'd whilst their Carpenter, thro' a violent Indisposition, was utterly incapacitated from giving his necessary Assistance, almost his Advice; and the rest so enseebled and dispirited, that only the Master and two more, could engage in dispatching the Work; and the Rigour of the Season was so extreme, that they could rarely attend it above four Hours in a Day, and fometimes do nothing at all.

They had now been upwards of a Week without any Kind of Sustenance, except the Cheese abovemention'd, and the Bones of three Pieces of Beef, render'd eatable by pounding on the Rock, whose Flesh the Fish and Salt-water had almost intirely consum'd; when, at several Leagues Distance, they saw three Boats under sail, to their

B 2

8

n

f

VI

1

Ç

n

V

1

I

t

a

e

1,

r,

n

ıt

r

1-

70

W

ne

n,

th

as

a

en

g-

C-nt

ng

ne if-

he

ie,

irs

h-ese of

ck, oft

if-

eir

at

great Rejoycing in Hopes of Deliverance: All crept out of the Tent, and hallow'd as loud as possible, making every imaginable Signal, but all in vain, for they neither heard or discover'd them. Notwithstanding, from hence they drew Matter of Encouragement; inferring, that as the Wind was N. E. at the Time they were cast away, so Part of the Wreck being driven on the opposite Shore might discover their Distress, and induce these Vesfels from the S. W. to come out in Quest of them, which they might continue to do, as oft as fair Weather presented. Their earnest Desire of Deliverance gull'd them into a Belief of this agreeable Delusion; and, tho' the Event discover'd its Fallacy, yet it ferv'd, for a while, to amuse a Despair, that vastly aggravated their lamentable Condition.

When they had almost finish'd their Boat, one Day at low Water, they found the Carpenter's Ax cast upon the Rock by the Sea, and with it completed the Work. It was then confulted, should adventure in her to get on Shore. Master, offering to be one, was universally approv'd of; as being, through Health and Strength, best able to go through all Extremities; the Mate, the Master's Brother, and four others agreed to accompany him; and then recommending the Enterprize to the Guidance of Divine Providence, all that were capable, affifting with their joint Endeavours, hall'd their ill-made, patch'd-up Boat, with infinite Difficulty, to the Water-side: This was on, or about, the 21st of December, being a fine Day, and the Water smoother than usual, yet the Surf running high, oblig'd them to wade very deep to launch her; and as foon as the Master and one more were got in, the Swell of the Sea,

C

f

b

h

e

V

0

P

u

b

0

t

a

g

a

C

0

n

1

b

n

2

g

r

17 t

I

E

t

2

in spight of all their Resistance, heav'd the Boat along Shore, and overfet her upon them, whereby the was stav'd to pieces, and they narrowly escap'd Drowning; with her were also lost both Ax and Hammer, Instruments that might have been of fingular Use to affift them in their last Expedient of building a Raft. This Disappointment immensely heighten'd their Afflictions, by intirely ruining all future Prospect and Projects of Deliverance; and yet that very Afternoon, they had fignal Reason to adore the infinite Goodness of God, graciously ordaining this Event for their Safety; for the Wind springing up, blew a Storm, and had they been at Sea in that paultry Resemblance of a Boat, they must, humanly speaking, have unavoidably gone to the Bottom, whilst those left behind, through Inability to provide for themselves, would have run an extreme Risque of sharing in a yet more deplorable Fate.

And now again return'd with redoubled Impetuolity, all the Fears and Despair that had been a while fuspended, during the mighty Expectations they had form'd from their Boat; and, in Truth, they were reduced to the most melancholick and miserable Circumstances. No Fire, and the Weather extreme Cold; their Hands and Feet frozen to a Degree of Mortification; feveral with large deep Ulcers, very offensive to the Smell, without any Plaister, save a Linnen-rag to wrap them in, The small Stock of Cheese spent, and nothing left to support their perishing Bodies, except Kelp, a Rockweed growing under Water, and Mussles fo difficult to get, as not to allow, at most, above three a Day for each Man; in the mean Time, it became the Master's unavoidable Province, to cleanfe cleanse and dress their Wounds, and procure these forry Viands for their Sustenance; scarce a Man besides being in a Condition so much as to help himself; and, to all this, add but a too well-grounded Apprehension of inevitably Perishing in the next Spring-tide, if accompanied with high Winds, the Sea, at such a Criss, overslowing the Rock. This was their State, pinch'd with Cold and Hunger, Groaning under the Extremity of Weakness and Pain, with Torture and Horror of Conscience, under a Foresight of a certain, painful, but dubious, whether sudden, or lingering Death, without any, even remote, View or Deliverance; so that the Susserers themselves, at any Distance of Time, cannot possibly revive in their Minds an adequate Idea of this Misery.

1

i

f

t

1

r

a

|-|,

d

t

-

a

15

h,

1-

n

0 ıŧ

n, ft

a

re

e,

to

As it pleased God to indulge the Master in a greater Share of Health and Strength of Body, and likewise a proportionate Vigour of Mind; so he continually endeavour'd to inftill into the Hearts of the dispirited People a Reliance on that Almighty Being, who is not confin'd to particular Means, nor always acts according to human Probabilities. At the Time of quitting the Wreck, nothing but immediate Death was in View; but after their Escape to the Rock, he grew more Sanguine, and scarce ever was without a secret Perfuasion of Deliverance. This buoy'd up his Spirits, and enabled him, amidst so many Discouragements, to provide Rockweed and Mussles, to attend the Sick and Diseased; and, in many laborious Instances, pursue the Good of every Individual. But his frequent Exhortations to wait with Patience the appointed Time of Divine Salvation, avail'd nothing, fince he could not possibly assign any any particular Medium of Rescue, that probably might take Place in so short a Space of Time, as they had a Prospect of continuing their Lives in their present Indigence of all Things; and, indeed, when Reason only presided, he was oblig'd to give up the Point in Dispute, and pronounc'd them arriv'd at the highest Degree of Calamity.

In this Conflict of Afflictions, as a Dawning of Hope to alleviate their Distress, it pleased God that the Mate should strike down a Sea-gull, which he brought with Joy; and the Master equally dividing, though raw, and scarce every Man a Mouthful, yet was gladly received, and eaten with

ſ

I

V

B

S

S

o

E

0 fi

E

tl

ti

la

u

a

great Thankfulness.

And now, as the last Resource of Hope, they began to refolve upon composing a Raft, capable of bearing two Men; a Project all along mightily urged by a Swede, a stout, brave Fellow, that had unhappily lost the Use of both his Feet by the Frost since he came upon the Rock; and here again open'd a new Scene of Labour and Difficulty, to build this without Tools, and, almost, without Hands; however, at length, after abundance of Toil in clearing the Fore-yard from Junk, they fplit it in the Midst, and constituting the two Parts for Side-pieces, twelve Foot long, interfix'd Spars, cover'd with the lightest Plank, four Foot broad, first Spiking, and then Seizing them firm; a short Mast was also fix'd, with a Sail made of two Hammocks driven on Shore, a Paddle was likewise provided for each Man, and a spare one made fast to the Raft in Case of Necessity. During the 5 or 6 Days Time, wherein this Work was compleating, the Swede frequently importun'd the Master to accompany him in the Attempt; yet yet giving him to understand, that if he refus'd. another was ready to embrace the Offer. The Master, deliberately weighing the Difficulties of the Adventure, judg'd them, rationally speaking, unfurmountable; confidering that Perfons already fo much reduc'd, must in so severe a Season, sit up to the Waste in Water, 10 or 12 Hours at least, with the utmost Favour of Wind, Tide and Weather, and therefore refolv'd to decline it; but, out of Prudence, conceal'd his Reasons and Resolutions, till Opportunity presented to put the Defign in Execution.

At this Time they faw a Sail coming out of Piscataqua River, about 7 Leagues to the Westward, to whom they endeavour'd to manifest themfelves by all possible Devices; but the Wind being N. W. and the Ship standing to the Eastward, was presently out of Sight, to a Renewal of their Mortification.

y

15

n

d,

1e

r-

of

od

ch

li-

a

th ey

le ly

ad

he

re

ıl-

h-ce

ey

NO

c'd

ot

m;

of

vas

one

Ju-

yet

The next being a moderate Day, and a small Breeze of Wind in the Afternoon fitting right on Shore, and the Raft now intirely finish'd, the Swede, and his Companion, that defir'd to go upon the Master's Refusal, were very follicitous to have the Raft launch'd, in order to pursue their Enterprize; the Mate, on the contrary, as strenuoully oppoling it, in regard to its being so late as two in the Afternoon; but they replying, it was full Moon, and light Nights, and redoubling their Entreaties, extorted the Master's Consent. First, then, with earnest Prayers committing them and their Design to the Divine Blessing, afterwards they ork launch'd the Raft, and both of them being placed n'd upon it, the Swell of the Sea going high, maugre pt; all their Endeavours, overfet the Raft, as heretofore the Boat, and away went the Mast and Sail; the Swede, being an excellent Swimmer, foon recover'd the Shore, and little regarded it; but the other, unskill'd in that Art, continued a while under Water, and upon his Appearance, being dragged to Land by the Master, was too much discouraged to make a fecond Essay. The Master then desir'd the Swede to assist in getting the Raft out of the Water, in Order to wait a more favourable Opportunity; but the Swede, persisting in his Resolution, tho' unable to stand upon his Feet, and, as he was kneeling on the Rock, caught hold on the Master's Hand, and with much Vehemency, befeeching him to accompany him, faid, I am fure I must die; however, I have great Hopes of being the Means of preferving your Life, and the rest of the People's; if you will not go with me, I beg your Assistance to turn the Raft, and help me upon it, for I am resolutely bent to venture, even tho' by myself alone. The Master us'd farther Dissuasives, representing the Impossibility of reaching the main Land in twice the Time they might have done before they were difarm'd of their Mast and Sail; but the Swede remain'd inflexible, affirming, with Imprecations, I had rather perish in the Sea, than continue one more Day in this miserable Condition. By this Time another, animated by his Example, offering to to with him, the Master consented, and giving them some Money, that accidentally was in his Pocket, fix'd them on the Raft, and help'd to launch them off from the Rock, committing them to the Mercy of the Seas, under the Care of divine Providence. Their last Words at parting were very moving, and deliver'd in a pathetic Accent: Pray Sir, oblige lige all the People to join in Prayers for us as long as you can fee us. All to a Man crept out of the Tent at this doleful Separation, and perform'd their Request with much Devotion. About Sun-fet they judg'd them half Way to Land, and hop'd they might gain the Shore by two in the Morning; but in the Night the Wind blew very hard, and two Days after the Raft was found on Shore, about a Mile distant from the Dead Body of the other Man, driven likewise on Shore with his Paddle still fast to his Wrist, but so much worn, as shew'd he had labour'd hard, but the bold Swede was never seen more.

e

5-

r

t

1-

n

t, d

1-m

of 10

I

lp

e,

r-

of

ey

of

n-

er

in

i-

n,

0-d

off

cy

e.

g, bgę

The Master had appointed these Adventurers to procure a Fire, to be made in the Woods, on a certain Hill, within Ken of this desolate Island, as a Signal of their getting alive on Shore, and the others expeditious Relief; and two Days after a Smoke arising from that Quarter, and daily continuing, tho upon a different Occasion, was yet with Reason, interpreted by them as a Token of speedy Deliverance. This Flush of Hope, under God, subserved for a Time to support them, accounting for the Delay by the Difficulty of procuring a Vessel, and the freezing up of the Rivers, common in such an Inclemency of this Season of the Year; but at last, Famine, deaf to all Remonstrances, began anew to excite Impatience.

The Spring-Tide, so justly dreaded, was now, God be thanked, safely over; however, one Inconvenience follow'd; the Water's not falling so low as before, depriv'd them, in a good Measure, of the Advantage of taking Mussles, a principal Branch of their daily Aliment. This irk some Employment, others resuling, sell to the Master's

Ca

Lot,

Lot, who ran a great Hazard of losing both Hands and Arms, by so frequently exposing them in the cold Water, altho, when taken, his Stomach rejected them, as offensive thro excessive Coldness, preferring Rockweed, of much easier Digestion, yet, either the Quality of the Herb, or the Effects of Hunger, render'd the Eaters very Costive. At their first Arrival they saw, and even stumbled upon several Seals on the Rock; the Master thence inferring it was their nightly Harbour, took frequent Walks at Midnight in View of intercepting them, but they had intirely forsaken the Island. Multitudes of Sea-Fowl also apppear'd, but observing Men daily there, refus'd to lodge on the Rock.

Their Necessities, in Regard to fresh Water, were indifferently well supplied all the Time by Rain, and melted Snow, lodging in the Concavities of the highest Part of the Rock, though the Taste was something brackish by the Spry of the Sea, at Spring-tides breaking over it, tho' God, of his infinite Mercy, by restraining the high Winds, prevented a total Inundation. During the Frost, they preferr'd the eating of Ice, which is fresh, tho' congeal'd from Salt-water; this the Master brought in great Lumps to the Side of the Tent, and every Man took what he pleased. They drank their Water out of a Powder-horn, and applied another to the Use of the diseased in the Tent.

At this Time the Master set the Insirm, and other-wise useless Hands, to open Junk, and with the Rope Yarn, drawn from thence, that ch'd the Tent, according to the best of his Skill in that Science; this serv'd to turn off 2 or 3 Hours Rain, and skreen them from the Asperities of the cold cutting Winds. Of this Oakum likewise the Master made

Swath-

St

at

ol

lie

C

Vi

ſ

C

Is

e

-

s,

1,

S

t

e

g I.

7/

5

2

3

>

1

5

-

Swathing Bands, in which he fwath'd up himself at Night, when he threw off his wet Cloaths, and obliging his Boy, swath'd in the same Manner, to lie upon him; this Device contributed much to the Conservation of his Health.

About the latter End of December, the Carpenter, a fat Man, naturally of a dull, heavy, phlegmatick Constution, and aged about 47, always very ill from his first coming on Shore, and had fince lost the Use of his Feet, now, in particular, complain'd of an excessive Pain in his Back, and Stiffness in his Neck; and, moreover, was almost fuffocated with an Inundation of Phlegm. foon grew speechless, tho' retaining his Senses, and drawing near to his End, in all Apprehension, they prayed over him; and in all Things, to the best of their Power, were ferviceable to him in his last Moments. Dying that Night, his Body remain'd in the Tent till the Morning, when the Master, as usual, going out in Quest of Provisions, order'd the People to remove the Corps to some Distance. Finding Part of a green Hide, fasten'd to a Piece of the Main-yard, newly thrown up by the Sea, he first endeavour'd to eat it, but his Teeth made no Impression; at Noon returning, the Men importun'd him to bring it into the Tent, and mincing it small, it was foon swallow'd down with a voracious Appetite. The Master then, observing the Carcass not carried off, began to expostulate warmly, demanding the Reason of their Disobedience: They excus'd themselves on the Score of Inability; imputing this to their Want of Spirit and Refolution, already the Cause of much Chagrin and Fatigue to him, and Mischief to themselves; he gave them a Rope, bidding them make it fast to the fir

Va

al

M

Si

ta

a

P

the Corps, and his Spirits being still in a Ferment, he essay'd to draw it out himself; but was soon convinc'd of the Decay of his Strength, by not being able to stir it. Another however assisting, the dead Body, at length, was haul'd a few Paces from the Tent. The Master afterwards, returning into the Tent, with his Powers enervated by this violent Exertion of himself, and his Mind oppressed with the most acute Sense of the various Miseries they were involv'd in, occasionally reinforced by the present Melancholick Instance, was ready to expire with Faintness and Anguish; and placing himself fo as to receive fome Refreshment by Sleep, he observ'd an unusual Air of Intentness in the Countenances of all the People; when after some Pause, Mr. Whitworth, a young Gentleman, his Mother's darling Son, delicately educated, amidst so great an Affluence as to despise common Food, as he then with Remorfe of Conscience acknowledg'd, began in the Name of the Assembly, to court the Master's Concurrence in converting the Humane Carcafs into the Matter of their Nourishment; and was immediately feconded by a great Majority, three only oppoling, on account of their esteeming it a heinous This Affair had been thus confulted, and concluded upon in the Master's Absence, and the present Method concerted of making it known by a Gentleman reputed to be much in his Favour. The Master remain'd in his former Posture, observing an invincible Silence, whilst they were urging their Desires with irresistible Vehemence; for nothing that ever befel him from the Day of his Birth, no not the Dread and Distress of his Soul upon quitting the Wreck, when he did not expect to live a Minute, was fo amazingly shocking, as this this unexpected Proposal; but, after a short Interval, refuming his Reason, and concealing his Infirmity for Decency's Sake, he maturely weighing all Circumstances, pronounc'd in Favour of the Majority, arguing the Improbability of its being a Sin to eat Human Flesh in a Case of such Necessity, provided they were no ways accessary to the taking away of Life. The Master then acquiefcing, on Condition of throwing into the Sea the Skin, and all Parts discovering it to be Human; and receiving from Time to Time their respective Portions, according to his Prescription, the People appear'd in a Transport of Joy; but all to a Man excused themselves from engaging in so odious a Work; alledging their Inability of abiding fo long in the Cold, and therefore most humbly implor'd the Continuance of his good Offices, even in this very difagreeable Instance. The Master took this extremely ill, and refus'd a good while to comply; but, at last, their incessant Prayers and Tears prevail'd, and by close of the Day, with another's Assistance, he had dispatch'd this very nauseous and difficult Task. A few thin Slices, wash'd in Salt-water, were brought into the Tent, and given to every one, with a good Quantity of Rockweed to fupply the Place of Bread. The first Piece the Master eat, was Part of the Gristles that compose the Breast, having the Flesh scrap'd clean off; for his Stomach, as yet, abominated the loathfome Diet, tho' his importunate Appetite had, more than once, led him to furvey with a longing Eye the Extremities of his fore Fingers, and a Day or two before compell'd him to taste his own Excrements. The Mate, and two other Opposers refus'd to partake of the Flesh that Night, but were the

S

N

Ca

ha

in

N

tł

o

tl

dS

0

b

t

N

a

iı

p

f

first next Morning to beg an equal Share in the common Allowance. The Master, to prevent Difpute, distributed it by Lot, with the utmost Impartiality; and to take off any Aversion, enjoin'd them to call it Beef; tho' this last Precaution was needless, fince they devour'd it in a rapacious Manner, and crav'd greater Quantities than confifted with Health, and the Extent of their small Stock; and in a few Days, lame and infirm as they were, he found himself oblig'd to remove the Pieces and Quarters to a craggy Eminency of difficult Access, and likewise to hold a stricter Hand, and exercise all the Authority he had taken at their Request over them, which their present Impotence, and his comparative Strength impower'd him to maintain; for on a sudden, he perceiv'd an Alteration in their Dispositions, infinitely to the worse, from a quiet, peaceable, affectionate Temper; a refign'd, submissive, religious Frame of Mind; the Majority grew fierce, brutish, barbarous, impatient in their Afflictions, and refractory to Command, using ill Language, Oaths and Imprecations; fo that the Master almost repented he had not turn'd the dead Carcass adrift in the Sea, instead of reserving it for Food, fince attended with fuch detestable Effects; however, this Deportment convinc'd him of the absolute Necessity of keeping a strict Watch over the Remainder of the Body, fince he had Reason to apprehend future Want would drive them to facrifice one another's Lives to their inexorable Hunger; and the Prolongation of their Miseries a few Days would infallibly have terminated in the dreadful Event. This Nutriment had also an ill Effect upon their Ulcers and Sores, endangering a Mortification more than ever; and herein the Master

n

,

h

d

d

,

e

t

S

r

7

Master incurr'd as great a Risque as any, having the Ends of his Fingers torn, and his Nails dislocated, on his first Recovering the Rock, and they had ever fince been constantly employed in building the Tent, Boat, and Raft, and a daily Acquisition of Victuals, &c. without either Ease or Medicine to fupply and heal them. To remedy this Inconvenience, the Master tried an Experiment of his own Conception, that fufficiently answer'd the Intention, viz. He applied Plaisterwise to the distempered Part, first cleansed and washed with Salt-water, the Fat taken off from the Kidneys of the deceased, reduced to a proper Consistence, by working it with a Stone, on a smooth Place of the Rock; and this prov'd a cooling, mollifying Medicament, giving much Ease to the Patient, and, peradventure, from something of this Kind, improved by the Hands of the Learned, may be prepared an excellent Digestive.

The close of the old Year left them in a most forlorn Condition; the Master's Brother attacked with Convulsive Fits, and frozen in feveral Fingers; Mr. Whitworth, his Friend, in both his Feet, fo that he oft expressed himself willing to compound for Life with the Loss of a Limb; the Master, thro' Sympathy with them, and Concern at the ill Success of every Enterprize for Deliverance, together with the daily Care and Fatigue unavoidably revolving upon him, became diminished in his Strength, and diffipated in the Faith and Refolution of his Mind; the rest of the People, half frozen, more than half famished, distempered, ulcerous; despairing, unable to help themselves; yet murmuring, prophane and blasphemous. In a Word, labouring under a Complication of the greatest Evils, Cold, Diseases, Famine, Prospect of Death, and Dread of Damnation.

But the Almighty, whose Mercies endure for ever, was graciously pleased to extend his undeferved Favour, for on the fecond of Fanuary, in the Morning, as the Master was creeping out of the Tent, he faw a Shallop half Way from Shore, standing directly towards the Rock, under a brisk Gale of Wind, and immediately crying out, a Sail, a Sail, unable to utter more thro' an Extafy of Joy; not a Soul amongst them, how weak and infirm foever, but instantly thrust out his Head to fee so desirable a Sight; and to express the Raptures diffused throughout the whole Company, upon the Prospect of so sudden and unexpected a Deliverance, outstrips the Powers of Tongue and Mind; 'twas Life from the Dead. The Master kept walking on the Rock to direct their good and welcome Friends to the properest Anchorage; but they not understanding his Signs, let go in a very different Place, about 100 Yards S. W. off of the Island, the Swell of the Sea not permitting a nearer Approach, their Anchor coming Home, they were obliged to weigh, and stand off 'till Noon, in Expectation of smoother Water on the Flood; in the mean Time the weak and disorder'd Minds of the poor Creatures on the Rock were strangely hurry'd with fluctuating Passions, thro' Fears of Miscarriage, and Hopes of Deliverance.

At Flood the Vessel coming nigh, cast Anchor by the Master's Directions in a commodious Place, within Call of the Island; where the Master gave them an Account of their Miseries in every Respect, except the Want of Provisions; concealing this, least an Apprehension of being constrain'd to abide

r

n

f

e, k

1,

f

d

0

)-

7,

a

d

r

d

t

e

r

C

e

e

d

r

abide on the Rock, thro' any Extremity of We .ther, should deter them from coming on Shore to their Assistance: observing also, they were unprovided of a proper Boat to carry them off, he earnestly requested them to furnish him with Fire, if they could not possibly accomplish their immediate Deliverance. Hoisting out a small Canoe, one Man came off, and gaining the Rock with abundance of Difficulty, the Master assisted to haul the Boat on Shore, and perceiving no Eatables therein, enquir'd of the Man, if he could help him to Fire? He replied in the Affirmative, after some Hesitation occasioned by his Astonishment at the Master's thin and meagre Aspect. Several other Questions being alternately refolv'd, as, What Day of the Week it was, &c. and, in particular, a Relation made of the Manner of finding the Raft and dead Corps, which mov'd the Government to fend them out on the present Design; as they were passing on towards the Tent, the Man casting his Eye on the Remains of the Flesh, exposed to the Frost on the Summit of the Rock, expressed his Satisfaction at their not being destitute of Provisions; and the Master acquiesced in the Justice of his Sentiments, without unravelling the Mystery. Arriving at the Tent he was perfectly affrighted at the ghaftly Figure of fo many difmal Objects, with long Beards, nothing but Skin and Bone; wild staring Eyes, and Countenances, fierce, barbarous, unwashed, and infected with humane Gore. After kindling a Fire, with much Labour, the Master accompanied the Man to his Boat, intending to go on Board with him, and afterwards fend for the Rest, one or two at a Time, and carry them all off that Night: both getting in, the Sea drove the Canoe with fuch Force against the Rock, as overset her in the Water, whereby the Master, so greatly reduced in his Strength, was a long while unable to recover himself, and narrowly escap'd Drowning. The good Man, making a second Attempt alone, recover'd the Shallop with Dissiculty; having solemnly assured them at parting, of coming again the next Day with better Accommodations, if Weather permitted.

Now again, as an Allay to their newly conceiv'd Joy, they beheld their worthy Friends in the Shallop, standing away for the Shore without them; but the infinitely Wife and Good God, whose fole Prerogative it is to appoint the Time, as well as Means of Man's Deliverance, by frustrating the prefent Appearance, effectually secur'd the Accomplishment of their Prefervation, for the Wind coming about to S. E. blew very hard, and the Night proving exceeding Dark, the Vessel was stranded in returning, and the Men, with much Hazard, escaped to the Main Land, but had these helpless Wretches been there, they must have perish'd in all probability. Immediately upon their Landing, an Express was fent to Portsmouth, on Piscataqua River, and the good People there laid hold on the first fair Weather to hasten to their Relief. In the mean Time, tho' they had Reason to believe their Condition known, and therefore to expect a fpeedy Assistance; yet their Flesh being near spent, the next Day proving Stormy, and the Uncertainty of fuch bad Weather's Continuance, all ferv'd to revive their Grief, and exercise their Patience; however the Misery of their Circumstances was much alleviated by the Advantage of Fire to keep them them warm, and broil their Meat, from thence af-fuming a much more favoury Relish.

The Fire was made in the Middle of the Tent, and hemm'd in with Stones to prevent its Excursion; their Fewel consisted of Ropes cut into short Lengths, and brought up to the Tent by the Master. At the first making of the Fire, no Vent being contriv'd for the Smoke, the People were almost suffocated, several fainting away, and others grew extreme Sick; but an opening being made in the Top of the Tent, the ill Effect ceased. A constant Watch of two at a Time, continually attended the Fire; and were statedly relieved every two Hours, tho' subject to some Inequality, being reckon'd by Computation.

n

r

e

e

r

H

e

S

7

1

The Men now urg'd the Master, to enlarge their Allowance of Flesh; and he in part comply'd, but not to their Satisfaction: In the Night, as he lay amongst the People, asleep to all Appearance, he overheard the two that had the Watch, whifpering with fomething of an earnest Accent; and soon after perceiv'd one creep out of the Tent, and ere long returning with a Part of their small Stock, tho' the Flesh lay at a considerable Distance; the Rock was rough and uneven, and this very Fellow for fome Time past, especially when any Thing was commanded to be done, had no other Way of moving but on his Hands and Knees; as they were bufy in broiling their Purchase, the Master fuddenly starting up, seiz'd it, and forthwith acquainted the whole Company; it was proposed to inflict an exemplary Punishment, but as the Case then stood, they came off with a severe Reprimand:

And now when they came to fo low an Ebb in the Article of Provisions, that the whole Remainder of the Flesh was allotted for the next Repast; as it pleas'd God, the Wind abated in the Night of the 3d of Fanuary, and early on the 4th in the Morning, whilst at their Devotions, they were agreeably furpriz'd at the Report of a Musquet, and looking out, faw a Shallop near the Rock. They came to an Anchor, and having a good Canoe, the Mafter's much esteem'd Friends, William Long of Old-England, and Jethro Furber of New-England, both Masters of Ships, with three others, soon came on Shore, the Master standing at the Waterside to receive and welcome them to that defolate Island. After first Salutations past, and learning the summary State of their Case, having look'd about as far as Curiofity prompted, they first took the Master on board of the Shallop, and then, being very brisk, strong Men, brought the rest, two or three at a time, must of them on their Backs, from the Tent to the Canoe, tho' none of them were free from Vermin; and in two Hours Time they were all on board to their worthy Friends Satisfaction, and their own inexpressible Joy. The first Sustenance they received, was a Bit of Bread and a Dram of Rum each, and foon after a Mess of Water-Gruel every one, prepar'd in sufficient Quantity by a charitable Gentlewoman, whose Husband own'd the Shallop, and this was excellently accommodated to their Condition, and prov'd of fingular Benefit; for the Wind being contrary, and blowing a Gale, they were oblig'd to carry much Sail, which rendred the poor hunger-starved Wretches extremely Sea-sick; and the Water-Gruel promoting a Facility in vomiting, ferv'd to cleanse their Stomachs, after which they grew excessively hungry and ravenous.

e

-

e

9

In the Close of the Evening they got within the Mouth of Piscatagua River; and the Master hir'd a Canoe to carry Mr. Whitworth and himself to their Lodgings at Mr. Furber's with greater Expedition. By eight a-Clock they landed, and the Master being shewed the House, ran directly in, to the terrible Affrightment of the Gentlewoman and her Children, who took the first Opportunity of making a fair Escape, and left all to his Discretion; and he, tho' emaciated to a Skeleton, yet being in perfect Health, was unmercifully hungry, and therefore taking Occasion to rummage the Pot on the Fire, found the Contents to be Beef and Turnips, refolving thereupon to stand Cook for once; before the Men that row'd them up arriv'd with Mr. Whitworth, whom they were oblig'd to carry, he had taken up the Turnips and spread them on the Table to render them Mouth-meat, and some fmall Portion he had already fecured in his Belly; but the People unacceptably intervening, restrain'd him from eating any more at that time. The Mistress of the Family, learning who they were, return'd to the House, and the Master, with his Friend, was put into a Room apart. Soon after they were visited by Mr. Packer, Practitioner in Physick and Surgery, by especial Order of the Government, whose Administrators, by an Excess of Generosity, had fent out, that Day, two other Vessels to their Assistance in Case of Necessity; and now, in farther Profecution of the fame Pious and Charitable Care, Lodgings, Food and Nurses were provided for the People, during their Infirmity, Cloaths, Linnen and Woollen, given them upon their Recovery, all at the publick Expence: And had not their unworthy, intemperate Behaviour, plainly evinc'd them to be guilty of Ingratitude towards God and Difregard to Man, they were upon the Point of receiving yet farther Instances of their Charity and Christian Compassion. The Gentlemen, most forward in promoting this generous Benevolence towards the Distress'd, were, the ever to be respected for Plaisted and John Wentworth Esqrs. to their own considerable private Charge, tho' the Master and Mr. Whitworth, having sufficient Credit, bore their own Expences.

A limited Diet and requisite Purges being administred, in process of Time all recover'd, tho' every one, excepting the Master, lost the Use of Fingers or Toes, or some other Part of his Body; and in particular, the Master's Boy suffer'd the Loss of a Foot. At the sirst Publication of this Narrative, the Master, the Mate, and Mr. Whitworth were all in England; but, in a Course of Twenty Seven Years since, the Master alone survives of all that he particularly knew.

And now, after such an Interval of Time, to do Justice to the Names and Memories of those beneficent Gentlemen, whose admir'd Humanity on this Occasion, deserves Applause and Imitation throughout succeeding Ages; and in Order to perpetuate the Remembrance of the gracious Proceedings of Divine Providence in its admirable Conduct towards them, the Master, in Pursuance of his Design, begun in 1727, continues to distribute annually, a certain Number of these Narratives on board the Ships, trading in and to New-England, hoping (with a Divine Blessing) it may prove of Service to reclaim some of the unthinking Part of his own Fraternity.

FINIS.

LOSE OF

- V S 1 1 , = 1 :